

“Getting dental implants has made all the difference. Now I don’t have to worry about my denture falling out and I can eat all my favourite foods again.”

A typical comment from one of Andrew McCulloch’s implant patients.

Dental implants look, feel and function just like natural teeth. They eliminate the discomfort, insecurity and looseness of ill fitting dentures. Quite simply, you can count on natural looking teeth and the attractive, confident smile that comes with it. Implants are used to permanently replace one, several or all teeth in the upper or lower jaw. Conventional crowns and bridges involve grinding down, usually healthy teeth, but implants are anchored in the jawbone stimulating bone tissue just like natural teeth and not damaging adjacent ones.

An implant is a small titanium screw that is attached biologically to jawbone to act as a foundation onto which crowns, bridges or dentures are placed. Titanium is a metal that is acceptable to the body and allows bone to grow onto it.

At the initial consultation with Andrew McCulloch you’ll get a solution tailored to your needs, general state of health and the quantity of your bone. These factors determine the total duration of treatment. Andrew is committed to making the treatment as comfortable as possible. Implant placement is carried out under a local anaesthetic. After a healing period of a few months the definitive tooth replacements are attached to the implant.
